Subject: Redhat proposal

Dear sirs,

I think that the proposal Redhat has suggested regarding the remedies that should be applied to Microsoft, points to a very important issue: deployment of Microsoft only software in schools around the US will only consolidate their monopoly on the desktop and make considerable inroads in the server area. In the end, it would turn out to be the opposite of a penalty.

Regards,

Carlos

P.S.: Although I am not a US citizen, Microsoft's monopolistic practices are felt all over the world, and maybe more so here in Portugal than even in the US.
